

Our Bond by Lucy Gentry

A warm hug every now and then is absolutely splendid
The way you understand just shows how much you love me Even though we act like monsters, our hearts just want to be loved

Our relationship is like thread woven into a tapestry Anybody can say they love you but nothing compares to family Anger can be scratched into our hearts
But nothing can be perfect
So let's make every moment count

An argument can slow us down but shouldn't tear us apart Nothing is worse than friction between parents and their child Smashing together in conflict and rage is not the way to love Apologies, apologies, apologies Don't ever say anything you will regret

We shouldn't drift away like icebergs in a cold and frozen ocean Be grateful for every day you have with me You never know which one could be the last
You have told me that I am the joy of your life
And I wish for it to be like this forever

A smile
A wave
A hug
Could put our pieces back in place
We need to find who we really are Not monsters, but people who long for love

Words can't express how every child loves their parents
The way a mother bear gently swaddles her vulnerable cubs Relationships between them should never be stopped We only have one set of parents and they can never be replaced We love them and they love us and that's how it should stay
